Lesson 48 Summary

This lesson focuses on the highly practical and frequently used Spanish construction “para que” + subjunctive, which expresses purpose or intent. This structure is essential for forming sentences that explain why something is done or to what end.

Core Pattern

[Main clause with indicative] + para que + [subjunctive clause]

This construction always triggers the subjunctive because it introduces a goal or desired outcome that has not yet occurred.

Examples:

- Hago videos como este para que mejores tu español.
(I make videos like this so that you improve your Spanish.)
- Le regalo flores a mi esposa para que sepa que la amo.
(I give my wife flowers so that she knows I love her.)

In both cases, the verb after para que is in the present subjunctive because it refers to a potential or intended future result.

Subject Change Matters

As with other subjunctive triggers, a change in subject is key. If there is no subject change, use “para” + infinitive instead of “para que” + subjunctive.

Examples:

- Trabajo todos los días para irme de vacaciones en verano.
(I work every day in order to go on vacation in the summer.)
→ One subject: “I”
- Trabajo duro para que mi esposa y yo podamos irnos de vacaciones dos veces al año.
(I work hard so that my wife and I can go on vacation twice a year.)
→ Subject change: “I” → “my wife and I” → use “para que” + subjunctive

Giving Reasons and Expressing Intent

“Para que” is commonly used to give a reason for a command or an action:

- Cierra la puerta para que el gato no se escape.
(Close the door so that the cat doesn’t escape.)
- Pon las chuletas en el congelador para que no se echen a perder.
(Put the pork chops in the freezer so they don’t go bad.)

It can also be used as a sentence starter to answer questions of purpose:

- ¿Por qué quieres sentarte cerca de la entrada?
– Para que Juan me vea cuando llegue.
(So that Juan sees me when he arrives.)

Past Tense and the Imperfect Subjunctive

When the main clause is in the past tense, and the result clause expresses intent using “would” in English, the imperfect subjunctive is required.

Examples:

- Pinté la casa para que se vendiera más rápido.
(I painted the house so it would sell faster.)
- Decidí contarle a Juan lo que pasó ese día para que supiera la verdad.
(I decided to tell Juan what happened that day so he would know the truth.)

The use of the imperfect subjunctive (e.g., supiera, vendiera) ensures tense consistency with the past-tense main verb (e.g., pinté, decidí).

Summary of Rules

1. Use “para que” + subjunctive when:
 - Expressing purpose or intent
 - There is a subject change between the two clauses
2. Use “para” + infinitive when:
 - There is no subject change
3. In the present or future, use the present subjunctive after “para que.”

4. In the past, use the imperfect subjunctive after “para que” when expressing “so that [someone] would...”

Example Conjugations

Subjunctive (Present):

- poder → pueda
- saber → sepa
- jugar → juegue
- llegar → llegue

Imperfect Subjunctive (for past context):

- vender → vendiera
 - saber → supiera

This construction is incredibly versatile and appears in everyday Spanish conversation and writing. Mastering it will give students the ability to express complex, goal-driven ideas fluently and correctly across tenses.
