In this lesson, Paul introduces cada vez as a flexible and underappreciated phrase in Spanish that means “each time” or “every time.” The lesson explores its use in temporal constructions, progressive comparisons, and frequency expressions.

1. Cada vez que – Each Time That / Every Time That

The most basic and common use of cada vez que is to express “each time that” or “every time that” something happens.

Examples:

- Cada vez que te veo, me siento feliz. – Every time I see you, I feel happy.
- Cada vez que Juan viene a mi casa, termina quejándose de algo. – Every time Juan comes to my house, he ends up complaining about something.

This can be paired with expressions like terminar + gerundio or acabar + gerundio to express “to end up doing something.”

2. Cada vez más – More and More

This expression is used to show gradual increase or intensification.

Examples:

- La ciudad está cada vez más peligrosa. – The city is getting more and more dangerous.
- El tráfico es cada vez más pesado. – Traffic is getting heavier and heavier.
- Ella está cada vez más nerviosa antes de los exámenes. – She gets more and more nervous before exams.

Common expressions to practice:

- Cada vez más gente – More and more people
- Cada vez más seguido / más a menudo – More and more often

3. Cada vez menos – Less and Less

This is used to express a gradual decrease.

Examples:

- Tengo cada vez menos tiempo libre. – I have less and less free time.

4. Cada vez mejor / Cada vez peor – Better and Better / Worse and Worse

These forms express improvement or deterioration.

Examples:

- Mi español está cada vez mejor. – My Spanish is getting better and better.
- Mi español está cada vez peor. – My Spanish is getting worse and worse.

5. Combining Uses

A great way to practice cada vez is by combining its uses into a single sentence:

Example:

- Cada vez que estudio, entiendo cada vez más. – Every time I study, I understand more and more.

Conclusion

Cada vez constructions are highly useful and appear frequently in both spoken and written Spanish. They allow speakers to express repetition, intensification, frequency, and progression in a natural way. Learners are encouraged to add these formulas to their word lists and try combining them for fluency and flexibility in communication.
